Thursday April 21, 2022 7:54 am PDT by Hartley CharltonMembers of the European Parliament this week voted overwhelmingly in support of legislation that will compel Apple to offer a USB-C port on all iPhones, iPads, and AirPods in Europe. The proposal, known as a directive, will force all consumer electronics manufacturers who sell devices in Europe to ensure that all new phones, tablets, laptops, digital cameras, headphones, headsets, handheld... "Hard reset" redirects here. For the video game, see Hard Reset. A hardware reset or hard reset of a computer system is a hardware operation that re-initializes the core hardware components of the system, thus ending all current software operations in the system. This is typically, but not always, followed by booting of the system into firmware that re-initializes the rest of the system, and restarts the operating system. Hardware resets are an essential part of the power-on process, but may also be triggered without power cycling the system by direct user intervention via a physical reset button, watchdog timers, or by software intervention that, as its last action, activates the hardware reset line (e.g, in a fatal error where the computer crashes). User initiated hard resets can be used to reset the device if the software hangs, crashes, or is otherwise unresponsive. However, data may become corrupted if this occurs.[1] Generally, a hard reset is initiated by pressing a dedicated reset button, or holding a combination of buttons on some mobile devices.[2][3] Devices may not have a dedicated Reset button, but have the user hold the power button to cut power, which the user can then turn the computer back on.[4] On some systems (e.g, the PlayStation 2 video game console), pressing and releasing the power button initiates a hard reset, and holding the button turns the system off. Hardware reset in 80x86 IBM PC The 8086 microprocessors provide RESET pin that is used to do the hardware reset. When a HIGH is applied to the pin, the CPU immediately stops, and sets the major registers to these values: Register Value CS (Code Segment) 0xFFFF DS (Data Segment) 0x0000 ES (Extra Data Segment) 0x0000 SS (Stack Segment) 0x0000 IP (Instruction Pointer) 0x0000 The CPU uses the values of CS and IP registers to find the location of the next instruction to execute. Location of next instruction is calculated using this simple equation: Location of next instruction = (CS
